FEATURED SPEAKER: SHARON HARMON

Topic: "Oregon Humane Society – Disaster response and Plans for the Future."

Sharon was introduced by Bill Ramirez. She is a Portland native and has been a professional in animal care and welfare for 39 years. She is at the Oregon Humane Society (OHS), the state's largest and oldest animal protection agency, for 31 years. She is serving at OHS as President and CEO since 1998. Under her leadership OHS has 98% save rate, OHS' adoption rate is consistently 3-4 times above the national average and is one of the highest in the nation.

Sharon holds a B.S. degree in Science and Zoology from Oregon State University, a Certificate on Non-Profit Business & Management from John Hopkins University, and she is a Certified Animal Welfare Administrator. She Chaired the National Federation of Humane Society Board of Directors and currently serves in several prestigious organizations and associations. She shares her home with her husband, two dogs and a cat.

Sharon told us that she started her career at OHS cleaning kennels. She manages evidence related to large-scale animal cruelty cases. Today, Sharon wanted to mainly focus on the disaster planning. OHS plays a role in disaster response across the country from fighting fires in Oregon to providing relief to hurricane victims in Louisiana. Because of OHS' substantial access to the community, excellent facility and highly trained team of nearly 200 FEMA certified disaster responders, Sharon said, her organization is able to provide services to several state and federal agencies. One of the best roles OHS plays is Wildfire Response by providing material supplies, direct animal rescue, and evacuation of all the shelters and resources there-in. OHS makes sure to keep the pets in their local communities by working with FEMA, American Red Cross, the State Department of Agriculture, and other organizations.

OHS has been significantly impacted by Covid-19 pandemic like everyone else, but lot of foundations and companies have come forward to help the organization. OHS has supplied pet food and supplies to each and all 36 counties in Oregon. With The New Road Ahead in mind OHS plans to provide: Community Teaching Hospital, Animal Crimes Forensic Center, Dedicated Animal Rescue Center and Behavior Rehabilitation Center.
