President's Message

Good morning to all Rotarians and friends,

Today is September 11 and we remember the horrific scene of the twin towers attacked by foreign terrorists twenty years ago. Since then, there have been no known foreign attacks on our country. This is largely due to the fact that we have spent up to 15% of our discretionary funding on counterterrorism measures and created an entire department within the government to monitor and repel terrorist attacks. The efforts have been extremely successful in identifying and stopping attacks before they are able to launch from abroad. The threat and reality of terrorist attacks remain however, internally. There are numerous attacks each year from internal sources, often inspired by ISIS. The greater threat now comes from individuals inspired by various extremist ideologies including white supremacy, nationalism, and ideological misogyny.

As we work towards our goals of making our communities better places to live, combating racism, and tackling climate change, we must also remain vigilant of the forces that can undermine these efforts. Extremism in any form undermines the efforts of those who seek consensus and moderation. We must find ways to forge a path forward without destroying the basic principles that have made this society flourish. We are a country that had benefited and strengthened by including people from many different backgrounds, and we must remember that what makes our nation the greatest on earth is our ability to recognize, respect, utilize and embrace the strengths of our diverse citizens.

My two cents while pondering the day. See you all on zoom this Tuesday.

With warmest regards,

Raquel.

Oregon Volcanos. What does the future hold?

The Spine of the Willamette Valley from Mount Saint Helens, through the middle of Oregon to Crater Lake is basically a string of Volcanos. One has erupted within memory. What does that mean for the future of Oregon?

Meredith Townsend, assistant professor in the Department of Earth Sciences at the University of Oregon, will be the featured speaker Tuesday, September 14th.

◆ While most of my work to date has applied to volcanology, I generally am fascinated by all things rock mechanics. I am interested in understanding how geologic structures like faults and fractures initiate and evolve, and how their behavior affects hydrologic, hydrocarbon, and magmatic systems.◆

Rotary Covid Duty

Covid Report from Liz Ness

Covid-19 remains at the forefront of our lives as Oregonians work to reduce this threat. Since the indoor mask mandate has been reinstated we've gone from a 420 cases a day moving average in mid August to 273 this past Friday. Our greatest concern is the increase in cases for the youth of our state as more than 1/3 of cases in the last two weeks have been in those 29 years of age and younger. As we await the approval of the vaccine for those ages 5-11 we know that will mean an immediate increase in demand and our volunteers stand ready. If you've not yet volunteered please contact us to be vetted and added to the emailing list. Liz Ness beans1259@aol.com or Pete Gribskov petelauriegribskov@comcast.net.
