Honest
Direct Respectful

three simple words that will change your life

by DENNIS ADAMS
with Sue Schumann Warner

The Delta breeze was really blowing, so we moved the meeting indoors. A feast of Italian raviolis, Pesto pasta, and overly abundant salad, rolls and baked chicken was waiting for us!

Martin Ross led the pledge, the 4-way test and gave the thought. He said, if we can all be Honest, Direct and Respectful, it could change your life. No one is born with perfect communication skills. This practical guide offers a rare balance of wisdom and humor; unlike more complicated and theoretical books on assertion, communication, and conflict resolution, the principles are easy to apply, and are useful for all ages. Discover the ways in which experiences from the past, such as hurt, anger, and bitterness affect how you communicate today. Incorporate three simple words into your life-honest, direct, respectful-and change the way you communicate.

Executive Director Phillip Merlo

Speaker:

Speaker chair Andy Chesley introduced Phillip Merlo Executive Director of the San Joaquin County Historical Society. Here's their new web page SJC Historical Museum – \(sanjoaquinhistory.org\)

Phillip was born and raised in Stockton, California, where he currently is the Executive Director at the San Joaquin County Historical Museum. His passions include local history, youth empowerment, cultural bridge building, environmental science and policy, and East Asian languages and history.

After graduating from Franklin High with his IB diploma, Phillip attended UC Berkeley, studying abroad at Peking and Minzu Universities in Beijing, China. He graduated from Berkeley with degrees in Geography and History, and wrote his honors thesis on the creation of civic identity in a culturally diverse area of Southern China. At Berkeley he worked as a Resident and Community Leadership Assistant at Bowles Hall, and was nationally recognized for his programming and community development work by the National Residence Hall Honorary Society. He has taught seventh and tenth grade history at Franklin High School. He moonlights as a local historian and Science Olympiad Coach.

His experiences growing up in South and Midtown Stockton, as a student at Berkeley, and in China motivate him to use history to empower and provide opportunities for young people. While working in Stockton he hopes to continue his research on the municipal government's history of disinvestment in low income communities, and to partner with other educators to build new forums for youth civics and local history education.

Take a step back in time with us:
The San Joaquin County Historical Museum reveals the rich heritage of the region, from the Miwok and Yokuts Indians, to the development of modern agriculture and to Charles Weber – the founder of Stockton and the first farmer in the area.

Nestled on 18-acres in beautiful Micke Grove Regional Park, the atmosphere and the charm of the Museum encourages friendly family outings, picnic lunches and strolls through our many exhibits and buildings while you gain valuable knowledge of the rich history of San Joaquin County.

The Museum offers educational experiences that showcase the county's traditions of ingenuity, innovation, and invention – with emphasis on San Joaquin County's singular contributions in agriculture – to promote community pride, continued learning, and an appreciation of regional history among County residents and visitors.

Recently a new generation of staff and employees has been overhauling the entire organization from a new web page to , for the first time renting the space for fundraisers, wine tastings and weddings.

They want to do exhibit upgrades and strengthen cornerstone programs, like Valley Days and Festival of Trees for Christmas.

They are involved with the historical preservation of our local history. Recently saved County Sheriff's records going back to 1849 to present. SJ County was the first county to take mug shots! They started in 1869! Includes a mugshot of Black Bart!

New ideas are "Wine with Weber". Showcasing small local wineries to the public.

They have developed educational software, digital exhibits, video games including props and tools to use.

All to teach San Joaquin History to the old and new members of our diverse community.

President Evan thanked Phillip for the talk and rang the bell at 1:18pm.

Intense discussion or slight of hand?
