Global Scholar Kelsea Jeon Completes First of Three Terms at Oxford

I completed my first of three terms at Oxford, where I am completing a master's in Socio-Legal Research.

My studies focus on how nonlawyers can help litigants unable to afford attorneys resolve their legal matters. My research falls under Rotary's Peace and Conflict Resolution area of focus. Over the term, I've learned about how conflicts are transformed into legal claims, the gap within the lawyer-client relationship, and about the potential of advice workers who are not lawyers to make the law more accessible for indigent litigants. I have explored these topics in Law and Society seminars about lawyers as translators and litigant experiences, learned about the breadth and depth of Socio-Legal Studies in weekly presentations by scholars in the field, and built on research ideas via discussions with my supervisors and peers.

Why Rotarians should engage with program alumni

When clubs cultivate relationships with Rotary alumni, both sides benefit.

It's always a pleasant surprise for Rotarians to meet someone who notices their Rotary pin and then to learn that the person was once a Rotary Youth Exchange student or Rotary Scholar. These conversations with Rotary alumni are great reminders of how many lives Rotary has had a positive effect on.

Rotary's alumni relations team is always ready to help you connect with alumni and answer your questions about engaging them in your club or district projects. Write to alumni@rotary.org.
