PROGRAM - Gregory Mathes - OPARC

OPARC is a non-profit 501(c)3 organization founded by five families in 1950 to provide education and services for people with disabilities. When California passed the Lanterman Developmental Disabilities Services Act in 1969 that guarantees people with developmental disabilities and their families the right to services and support needed to live a more integrated and normal life, the implementation was assigned to regional centers, including the Inland and San Gabriel/Pomona Regional Centers. OPARC is one of the largest vendors under contract with both of these centers to provide day program services to qualifying adults. OPARC focuses on providing employment and developmental services via four programs: The Work Activity Program (WAP) gives its more than 235 participants vocational skills training, speech pathology lessons, paid work experience, and individual case management services at OPARC's logistics facility. With this facility, OPARC offers commercial assembly, packaging, collating, and inspection services to businesses, including Toyota, Simpson Strong Tie, and Highwave. The Supported Employment Program (SE) places its 90 participants, either individually or in small groups, into regular employment and provides services to the employer to ensure that the job's requirements are met. The Adult Development Centers (ADC) provide community access, social interaction, and life skills training. The Summit Services provide specialized support for clients with a dual diagnosis of developmental and behavioral challenges, aiming to teach social skills, reduce behavioral incidents, and increase abilities to work in and enjoy the local community. Apart from having many opportunities for paid or volunteer work, OPARC is also constantly looking for employers willing to participate in their work-integration programs. Often, participation can bring financial benefits and OPARC will be available to ensure adequate performance on the offered jobs. A good way to test the idea is to participate in the Paid Internship Program which reimburses employers for wages and benefits to essentially create a form of free trial employment.
