Speaker: Donna Philips has been a volunteer with Powder Valley Nature Center in Kirkwood for two and a half years. During that time, she has been impressed by the level of expertise and dedication of everyone associated with the Missouri Department of Conservation.

Two things caught her attention and fueled her interest in black bears. The first was watching how popular black bear pelts, collars, and prints were with the public. From school-aged children to older adults, everyone flocks to their table when they have a black bear pelt on display. Second was the sighting of a black bear in Ballwin. Clearly something unique was happening with this animal and she wanted to learn more about it.

What Donna knows about black bears has come from reading Missouri Department of Conservation publications, listening to biologist’s report on their findings, and speaking with the naturalists at Powder Valley

50/50 Drawing: Amy Richards was winner of $30 but missed the marble pot of $124! Red Marbles Matter
