Recap of Last Week

A special thank you to Sean Brown, President and COO of SnapTech IT for a very informative presentation. He reminded us of all the hackers we hear about. Ransomware is now commonly known and he believes we are all in a cyberwar. The cost of cyber crime is immense. Cyber attacks can be extremely expensive - the 2018 incident in Atlanta cost the City $10 million, not to mention there are added costs to clean it all up.

Cyber attacks come primarily in 3 forms:

- a. Social Engineering ♦ Phishing emails, Spearphishing, Phone-vishing, and tailgating, USB (some USBs have malware installed on them)
- b. CEO ♦ fraud
- c. Malware
- d. Dark web ♦ an online market place where criminals sell information

Mr. Brown told us there are more than 350,000 malware programs created each and every day, and many are state-sponsored. Also, over 30,000 websites get hacked each day. Most of these hackers are extremely sophisticated now and very clever. Business owners need to have systems set up in place for protection against cyber crimes.

He shared with us that most of the hackers ♦ communications can be recognized by their ♦sense of urgency♦. So every time you feel like there is somewhat of an urgency to an email, stop and think about this, and do not click on the links.

He provided us a checklist to decrease our risk:

- The National Institute of Standards in Technology (NIST) created a Cybersecurity Framework and Mr. Brown offered to provide a Cyber Risk Assessment and Security Awareness Training if interested.
- Manage third party vendors. Make sure they have ONLY the information they need.
- IOT awareness. There are lots of connections to the internet in our homes and we need to realize each one is a potential risk point.
- Hardware/software inventory
- Develop an incident response plan
- Create a data and equipment disposal policy
- Develop a disaster recovery plan
- Have an enterprise firewall
- Have an image-based backup system and disaster recovery solution
- Manage anti-virus and anti-ransomware options and make sure they are up to date
- Patching ♦ Adobe, Shockwave are examples
- Email and spam management
- Always use Two-Factor Authentication
- Limit administrator accounts/access
- Physical security
- Remote access
- Be careful with public wifi

Sean said that everyone can get free antiware for their home at <https://home.Sophos.com>. He also stated that if any of us wanted a free risk assessment, to contact him.

New Member Induction Tom Upchurch inducted our newest member, Mike Smith. He is our Club's 103rd Rotary member. Congratulations, Mike! We are happy to have you with us!
