Patricia Gage, a former member of the club, was somehow categorized as children's book author.

She is so much more! Gage is a psychologist that specializes in children's anxiety disorders. Her new book Brain Smart Strategies For Your Anxious Child was written to address many of the issues children face in our stressful world. Older adults sometimes do not realize the pressure children face today as compared to us when we were young.

Almost all of us were bullied to some degree as kids. The difference between then and now is once we were home from school the bullying stopped. With social media, bullies can do so 24 hours a day.

With a year off from in person learning due to COVID, kids are under additional stress. Dr. Gage stated that some people are better able to handle stress than others. By a parent saying to their child don't worry about it is not going to help the child cope. Even if it seems minor to an adult it is real to the child and should be taken seriously.

The ability to handle stress runs in families. Dr. Gage has exercises and coping mechanisms in her book to help a child develop strategies to handle these situations.

Gage brought the club several of her books to sell or auction to help the Joyce Holmes Scholarship. They were dear friends.

You can find her books on Amazon HERE

Thank you, Patricia. How about putting on your Rotary pin once more.
