This week's speakers were members of the Drug Free Cecil Youth Coalition. These students work to reduce and prevent substance abuse in Cecil County. The group started after students made PSA videos during the Youth Leadership Summit at North Bay in November. Cecil County is the only place in the U.S. where a group like this is taking a stand.

The Youth Coalition was created as part of the Youth Empowerment Source to bring students from all of the county high schools together, instead of acting individually at their home schools. Some of the group's goals include seeing the overdose rate reduced and spreading the message that there are youth who are not using substances, and it's OK.

In February, the teens travelled to Washington, D.C. to be a part of the Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America forum. Students heard federal officials speak about the fight against drug abuse and became certified to teach about Over-the-Counter prescription drug abuse.

They held their first rally in May where young people spoke about drug abuse and prevention issues. The turnout was overwhelming and teens are excited to plan future rallies.

The group is travelling to Dallas, TX in July for another youth event, and will teach substance abuse prevention to over 1200 sixth graders at North Bay in September. They will also be recruiting ninth graders to become a part of their Coalition at the Cecil County Fair in July. Visit their table as part of the Cecil County Sheriff's Department booth.
