Josephine Esther Mentzer was born July 1, 1906 in Queens, NY, to Hungarian Jewish immigrants. Her father had a hardware store and mother had a favorite aunt named Estzi, which became Josephine's nickname (Estee). Josephine worked in her father's store and learned retail sales and entrepreneurship. After school, she worked for her uncle John Schotz (a chemist) who created skin care products. They sold these products to friends, then salons. In 1930 she married Joseph Lauter and her business name Estee Lauder was born. In 1953 the Youth Dew Beauty Oil was introduced and in 1998 Josephine was named the only female on the Times list of 20 most influential business leaders of the 20th Century.
