Speaker - Stacey Fabre

Stacey Fabre is a South Louisiana artist and self-described “carver of paint,” known for creating richly textured oil paintings using palette knives and an impasto technique that transforms paint into sculptural landscapes of color and movement. Inspired by the landscapes, architecture and culture of South Louisiana, including New Orleans where she was born and the Houma/Thibodaux area she now calls home, her work celebrates the beauty, history and spirit of the region.

Following a traumatic brain injury, Stacey's artistic journey took on a deeper meaning. Stacey was driven to create something unique to her, something that encompassed all of her favorite elements of art she learned along the way. She chose to eliminate what she didn't like about painting and only kept the good, happy parts and in that moment she was forever changed. She paints what she loves, embraces the history that surrounds us and takes in all the details as if it's the last time she'll ever see it. She's looking to create a lasting memory in case her memory fails in time. These paintings will forever hold all she holds dear of her surroundings while reminding her when she can no longer recall the why and the where. Painting reminders of positivity as recurring themes because the power of positive thought is what got her through and continues to get her through the toughest of times.

Through each painting, Stacey invites viewers to slow down, notice beauty in the everyday and embrace the power of perspective.
