Coos Bay North Bend's New Member Mentoring Program

The Rotary Club of Coos Bay North Bend has been adding and KEEPING new members? What is their secret? It is simple: make the new member feel welcome, educate them on Rotary and get them engaged in meaningful projects as soon as possible. How does the Rotary Club of Coos Bay North Bend educate their new members? They do this in a fun and personal orientation session. The club has developed an effective mentoring program that includes orientation on Rotary International as well as the inner workings of their club. Their new Orientation/Mentoring subcommittee has taken on this responsibility. It is chaired by Past President, Jay Schaefer and is comprised of past presidents and any members of the parent Membership Committee who wish to help. The subcommittee holds a fireside one hour orientation monthly. It utilizes the extensive materials that Eva and Patty as Co- Chairs of the Membership Committee developed to help their club's new members learn about their club. Membership Co-Chairs Eva and Patty have developed extensive materials to help their club's new members learn about their club. Some of the information they include in their orientation is information on their club, their club's calendar, detailed info on club committees and projects, instructions on accessing Dacdb, and they give each new member the Rotary Basics booklet. [RI publication 699-EN]. The highest attrition rate for new members is 0-3 years, which pretty much indicates that we are not doing enough to help new members engage in our clubs. Don't want to recreate a wheel? Eva and Patty are willing to share their program with clubs around the District. For help on developing your own mentoring program contact Eva at eva@epuerto.us. Shining the Spotlight on District 5110 Rotarians

By Theresa Thompson

2017-12-03

In 1991, Frances Dixon was invited to speak at a Rotary Club about Guatemala's long-standing 36-year civil war. Dixon had just established her nonprofit organization, Adopt-a-Village in Guatemala, in the unlikely location of northwest Guatemala where the conflict was at its most intense. "The mission of the organization," she explained to the audience, "is to provide access to education for hundreds of disadvantaged indigenous youth who have suffered the worst hardships of social inequality."

Inspired by Dixon's compelling message about the Mayan people of Guatemala, whose human rights had been brutally violated in the government's genocidal war, the Bonita Springs Rotary Club of southwest Florida awarded Adopt-a-Village in Guatemala $1,000 to purchase a small area of land where it would build its first school.

This event marked the beginning of an almost three-decade partnership with Rotary Clubs to help build schools, water systems, roads, and homes for the poor during the post-war construction era.

The refugees who came flooding back from Mexico after the peace treaty was signed—many suffering from tuberculosis and other illnesses—were aided by Adopt-a-Village through a generous Rotary Global grant.

Dixon, a tireless advocate for social justice and the Mayan people of northwestern Guatemala, was mindful that while these development projects offered much-needed aid to help the Maya rebuild their lives, it would not result in long-term change. She came to believe that the only hope for real and lasting peace in this beautiful but troubled country would come through education. Her goal focused on offering a quality education to Mayan youth—they would be the ones to change their country's future for the better.

Today, a unique educational community—Adopt-a-Village's Mayan Center for Education and Development—stands in a remote rainforest mountain where dozens of impoverished young Maya live and thrive as a result of the transformative education they receive. Moreover, surrounding villages have benefited from the organization's outreach programs, which include initiatives ranging from sustainable gardening and nutrition to literacy training.

Rotary Clubs have helped to fund the solar equipment that powers the middle and high schools in the Center. They have also helped to equip the schools with impressive computer and science labs—the first of their kind in the region. A state-of-the-art satellite system ensures that students can access the Internet for educational research. The Mayan Center's buildings are architecturally designed to withstand earthquakes, and a rainwater collection system serves the entire campus and its organic gardens. Students share daily chores that include food preparation, grounds keeping, managing the small chicken farm, and tending to the campus gardens that produce nutritious vegetables for staff and students.

The Mayan Center's curriculum includes community outreach programs designed to provide students with practical training to hone their skills, as well as aid members of their communities. An adjoining rain forest habitat offers students a rare opportunity to experience interactive learning in science and biology while studying the endangered wildlife living in the area.

Drawn to the extraordinary international efforts of Rotary, Dixon became a member in 1994 in Florida where she served as World Community Service chair at club and district levels. She is the proud recipient of a District Rotary Foundation Service Award, is a multiple Paul Harris fellow, and a Rotary alumna. When she moved to southwest Oregon five years ago, she continued her membership by joining the Rogue Gateway Rotary Club. "I am extremely grateful for the wonderful partnerships I have formed with Rotary Clubs over the years. It has been a rewarding experience to be a part of leadership efforts to build peace in the world," she says.

Rotary Club of Corvallis Uses District Grant To Help Prevent Teen Suicides

By Robert V. Thurston

2017-11-26

Like many other communities, Corvallis has been shocked and saddened by young people who take their own lives. Families, friends, schools and the community at large, are deeply affected when this happens. The Rotary Club of Corvallis, with support from local organizations (Samaritan Foundation, Mullins Foundation, National Alliance on Mental Illness) and a District Grant, partnered with the Youth Mental Health Coalition (YMHC) to provide a free mobile phone app entitled Mental Health and You (MHU) to youth in a tri-county area (Benton, Linn, Lincoln).

The power of this app is its customized and easily accessed local information, resources, contacts and crisis hot-line. It helps determine when a mental health issue is a crisis and what to do about it.

Most people, and especially teens, do not know where to go or who to contact if they or someone else is in crisis. Even if they think that a friend or acquaintance is in a bad place or reaching out for help through social media (Twitter, Facebook), they may be hesitant to speak to a parent, teacher or health practitioner. However, in this technological world, young people are comfortable using apps as a means to collect and deliver information, making the MHU app particularly appealing.

Rotarians are actively promoting the MHU app across the community, including school districts (e.g. the app has been downloaded into iPads given to middle school students), and school events, Oregon State University groups, faith organizations and many others. An anonymous donor is funding further marketing and an intern to work exclusively on this. Dr. Caroline Fisher, an involved Child Psychiatrist, says “I have been so delighted to hear how many people have not only downloaded the app but also used it.” A Counselor in Lebanon, Oregon credits the availability of the app for saving a student’s life. In our minds, that alone more than justifies this project.

If your club is interested in the Mental Health and You (MHU) app, please feel free to contact Erin Adolphsen at eadolphsen@samaritan.org.

State of Jefferson Vacation Raffle

By Jacqueline Oakley

2017-10-08

This project is providing funding for young Mayan women to learn to read and write Spanish, the Guatemalan national language. Only 10% of indigenous girls in this region of Guatemala graduate from primary school and they only learn the indigenous Mayan language. This is a major handicap to their prospects for further education. Let's Leave No Girl Behind provides funding that gives these young women a chance at literacy so that they may break the cycle of poverty. In addition, we also provide solar lighting so that they can continue their studies at night.

The Prize

The Raffle Winner will receive a one week stay for two to four people at any El Cid Vacations Club Resorts located in Mexico, England, Spain or Portugal, an approximate value of $2,000.

Let's Leave No Girl Behind

Project Description and Activities:

Introduce a Light and Literacy program into one remote Mayan village without electricity for ten families. The project will target both teen-age girls 13 – 18, as well as women who cannot read or write Spanish. One teen-age girl or woman per family will be selected to join the reading group.

A trained bilingual (Q'anjob'al and Spanish) "traveling teacher" will spend one day per week in the villages for six months to teach reading. The beneficiary families will have been introduced to the concept of "light and literacy" by a mini prototype project in which one child per family participates in a three-month reading program and earns a solar lamp.

At the end of the six-month training period, each girl/woman who succeeds in the program will be awarded a solar power kit that will provide basic lighting in her family's home.

Additionally, funds will be provided to pay for half an annual scholarship for a qualified teen-age girl of the region to attend middle school classes at the Maya Jaguar Educational Center's boarding school.

Number of Beneficiaries:

Whereas ten girls / women will directly benefit, once they have learned to read, those numbers will increase exponentially as they help to teach their siblings and children, thereby expanding the number of beneficiaries to a projected 60 children, based on average family size. Importantly, ten households will have the benefit of solar lighting of which no opportunity existed prior to a family's daughter or wife learning to read and earning solar electricity for the family's home.

The overall benefits for the participating girls/women are several:

- they will be empowered to read;
- they will be empowered to teach their siblings/children how to read;
- they will have earned valuable household equipment through their efforts in learning to read.
