WHAT IS MESSAGING?

Our messaging is everything we convey about Rotary, through images, in writing, and by speaking. Using a unified set of messages can ensure that no matter who's communicating and who's listening, we always tell a clear, cohesive version of Rotary's powerful story.

This guide doesn't provide wording to be used verbatim in all circumstances. Instead, it offers a starting point for your communications, with examples that can easily be adapted for various contexts and audiences.

ROTARY'S BRAND VOICE

When we talk about the Rotary brand, we're talking about the basic qualities and goals that unite all Rotary clubs and districts — what we offer to those who work with us, join a club, or participate in our programs and projects. Rotary's brand voice is the particular way we convey those qualities and goals — the tone we use when we talk about Rotary, and what we emphasize. Whether Rotary communications are produced by clubs, districts, or Rotary International, they will look, feel, and sound unmistakably like Rotary if we all use a consistent voice. How we speak, write, and design is guided by the attributes of our voice.

KEEPING YOUR PARTICULAR AUDIENCE IN MIND WHEN YOU CRAFT MESSAGES CAN HELP YOU:

- Translate Rotary's story into key points that will resonate with the audience

- Address the barriers that hold them back
- Guide communications development

EFFECTIVE MESSAGING INCLUDES:

- A primary message that is simple, is tailored for the audience, and calls on the audience to take some action
- A supporting message that reinforces the primary message and adds depth
- Proof, or tangible evidence that gives the audience a reason to believe what you say and be inspired by it
