

Rotary District 6910 Conference Service Project Update

As we move from the slightly uncomfortable “stuffing “of Thanksgiving and into the more active season of Christmas or Hanukkah, I hope you will plan on saving some of your stored energy for this Spring at the Rotary District 6910 Conference Service Project where we will work with Sustaining Way of Greenville, SC to help provide sustainable food opportunities for communities in that area - particularly those in and around Nicholtown. On Friday afternoon (of the conference) we will be working hands-on in the sustainable garden at their headquarters along with other smaller garden sites nearby. Final details will be worked out by next month’s newsletter, but there will be opportunities for clubs and individuals to sponsor additional plants, tools, or even garden areas to increase the scope of the project and the positive impact on the community. If you are Thankful for all the Blessings of your lives, keep your wallet or purse handy and we’ll soon provide you with an opportunity to express your gratitude in a very constructive way.

As soon as details are worked out, pledge sheets and project descriptions will be available in articles on The Rotary District 6910 Conference website, DACdb, the District Website, and emailed to all Club Presidents and Service Chairs. In the meantime, save some of that holiday energy for a day of giving back on Friday, April 22 in Greenville.
