The Evolving American Political System - Dr. Martin Slann, Nov. 8, 2018

Dr. Martin Slann is a professor and scholar of political science. He has published textbooks and scholarly readers on American Politics and International Terrorism as well as articles on the Israeli/Palestinian Conflict and Radical Islam. He spoke at our meeting Thursday, November 8, 2018 on "The Evolving American Political System," a timely subject after Tuesday's mid-term elections.

He has made hundreds of presentations at annual conferences of the American Political Science Administration and Midwest Science Association. He is co-founder of the Southern Regional Model United Nations Conference. He and his wife Ruth recently moved to Boynton Beach from Tyler Texas where he was the Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and a member of the Political Science Faculty at the University of Texas. He has a PhD from the University of Georgia, an MA from the University of Connecticut and AB from the University of Miami. He has been on the faculty of Clemson University, Penn State University, Macon State University, and the University of North Carolina – Pembroke.
