The son of internationally renowned cellist Nelson R. Cooke, Tony was born in Sydney, Australia in 1948 while his father was playing for the Sydney Symphony Orchestra. The family moved to London when his father was appointed Principal Cellist of the London Symphony Orchestra. Antony Cooke shares in his distinguished father's selection of the cello as a principal musical instrument and has performed as a principal cellist and soloist in concerts throughout Europe and the United States. Tony Cooke moved to the United States in 1974, when he was appointed Professor of Cello at the University of South Florida.
