Last Week's Program:

Program Chairperson Alex Cruz introduced Berkley LaPorte from CASA Domestic Violence Services, a non-profit 501c3 organization. "Stand Up to Silence" is their byword. Their Mission: Challenging the Societal Acceptance of all Forms of Domestic Violence. Their Vision: A Society Free from Domestic Violence. CASA was founded by Sr. Margaret Freeman in 1977 as the "Free Clinic Spouse Abuse Shelter," a service of the St. Petersburg Free Clinic providing emergency housing for up to 8 domestic violence survivors at a time. It soon became an independent 501c3 nonprofit organization, able to expand its services with financial support from a network of community organizations and members. CASA was incorporated in 1981 as an emergency shelter to accommodate 22 participants, children's programs, and an Outreach department to provide support groups and peer counseling, and the fundraising groundwork was laid in order develop a 30 bed shelter, which opened in 1992. Under the leadership of Linda A. Osmundson, CASA grew to include enhanced support groups, a 24-hour domestic violence hotline, outreach services, training for law enforcement and other community members, and youth programs such as the Peacemakers Program teaching violence prevention in Pre-K through 8th grade classes. CASA Collections Thrift Shoppe was opened in 1998 to collect items for domestic violence survivors and raise funds for CASA. In July 2015, CASA opened the doors to a newly constructed 133-bed domestic violence center. In addition to providing safe refuge to more than three times as many people at a time than before, it adds an integrated array of on-site support services such as a resource center and rapid re-housing program to help domestic violence survivors attain safety and economic opportunity.
