GUEST SPEAKER
Kathleen Dempsey
White Gloves and Rattlesnakes

Kathleen Dempsey has a master's degree in English from Kean University. She spent most of her career as a writer and editor for an international business magazine. She has written her own book, which she dedicated to her husband, Fred Segal. He originally encouraged her to keep a journal of her travels. It is titled "White Gloves and Rattlesnakes: An Old Broad's Life Travels".

In the book she describes how she had traveled to all 50 States and every continent. "White Gloves" refers to her upbringing and her involvement with the Daughters of the American Revolution. While her mother was taking her to white glove events, her father was encouraging her to be adventurous. She described a trip to Antarctica and fun fact: penguins eat shrimp so their poop is pink. Speaking of, she drank a prune soda in Russia, so she could not go on any excursions the next day. She also described a trip to Machu Pichu and being stuck on top of a pyramid because she was afraid of heights and needed someone to bring her down.

Her book can be purchased on Amazon for $90.00, but you can get an autographed copy from her directly for only $50.00. kbdempsey@yahoo.com or 954-781-1397.

The 50/50 Drawing was won by Fred Segal.
