Rotary Volunteers

You can find them working in remote clinics, refugee camps, makeshift hospitals, primitive villages, and their own communities. They are experts in administration, community development, education food production, health care, and water and sanitation. They are Rotary volunteers.

The Rotary Volunteer program encourages and facilitates volunteer service, putting Rotary's ideal of Service Above Self into action. The program is administered by Rotary Volunteers communities at the club, district, and international levels. Rotary volunteers have shared their expertise in a multitude of humanitarian projects around the world.

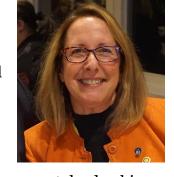

Rotarians and non-Rotarians who wish to serve as international volunteers can register with RI World Headquarters and are included in the Rotary Volunteers Database at www.rotary.org. resources for finding volunteer opportunities and special needs include the Rotary Volunteers International Site list Database and the Rotary Volunteers Resource list, both available at www.rotary.org. These tools can help volunteers locate their own projects and make arrangements directly with project coordinators manager in Utica) Cheryl added additional college courses in management, leadership, ethics, an employment law along with n advanced leadership program and a processing and distribution management program through postal headquarters.

Program

Today's program was presented by our new District 7150 Governor, presented by Judy Reilly our Assistant Governor. They were not on-site, using Zoom.

Cheryl joined Rotary in 1994 and belonged to clubs wherever she worked. She was board member and President-Elect in Canastota Rotary, president of Baldwinsville Rotary and board member while in Rome Rotary. After retiring in 2012, she joined the Rotary club of Dewitt where she was an immediate past president and membership chair. She was also an Assistant Governor. RI President Hoger Knaack's remarks as presented by Cheryl Matt Cheryl stated that Holger feels Rotary should be about friendship and integrity. His theme is ,"Rotary opens opportunities." His statement in the July Rotarian expresses his belief in creating opportunities for others and ourselves. He goes on to say that acts of service, large and small generates opportunities for people who need our help, and that Rotary opens opportunities for us to live a richer, more meaningful life with friends around the world, based on our core values.

He mentions that Rotarians have turned to Zoom during the Covid crisis. He also feels that younger generations have a strong desire to serve, but have questioned whether they could play a meaningful role in organization like Rotary or whether they might make a bigger impact forming different types of connections. Now is the time to put everything on the table, test new approaches and prepare rotary for the future. Cheryl Matt's remarks

Cheryl began by stating that the District wants to help the clubs within its area as well as beyond. She feels that we need to increase our impact, engagement, and adaptability among other areas. Small clubs only want to serve within their own communities. Larger clubs have reached out to the Covid fund. She wants t see young people in leadership roles with opportunities to hold leadership positions.

Cheryl states: Rotary can grow through satellite clubs, youth Exchange, Rotaract, and Interact clubs. It is also important to keep current members engaged. Trying different types of meetings may keep interest up. Clubs need to gain members who won't leave. Publicizing events is important so that people know what Rotary does. Partnering with other organizations is important. Cheryl mentioned that some clubs who had to cancel their main fundraisers asked sponsors for donations anyway.

Featured article Rotarian April 2020 Death by plastic...Welcome to plastic ville: population 7.8 billion (condensed)... Susan Freinkel

When, exactly did we take our first steps into this synthetic world? Some say it was in 1870 when the inventor John Wesley Hyatt patented a malleable compound that was originally conceived as a substitute for an increasingly scarce commodity: ivory. It was created from a natural polymer – the cellulose in cotton – combined with other ingredients;

Hyatt's brother Isaiah dubbed the new material celluloid, meaning "like cellulose.

Others fix the date to 1907, when a Belgian migre named Leo Baekeland cooked up bakelite; the first fully synthetic polymer, made entirely of molecules thagt couldn't be found in nature. Bakelite was invented to replace another scarce natural substance: shellac, a product of the sticky excretion of the female lac beetle. Demand for shellac began shooting up in the early 20th century because it was an excellent electrical insulator. (Taking 15,000 abeetles six months to make enrough of the amber colored resin needed to produce a pound of shellac) Leo Baekeland invented this plastic by combining formaldehyde with phenol (Waste product of coal) The mixture was subjected to heat and pressure and was more versatile than shellac.

The 1920's and 30's saw an outpouring of new maerials from labs aroung the world. One was cellulose acetate, a semi-synthetic product with plant cellulose being

Eyeglass frames

DuPont also introduced nylon, the answer to the centuries long search for artificial silk. Nylon stockings were promoted as being as lustrous as silk and as strong as steel.

> Though fully synthetic, like bakelite, many of the new materials differed on one significent way. Bakelinte is a thermoset plastic, meaning that itsplymer chains are hookedtogether through the heat ans pressure applied when it is molded. You can break a piece of bakelite, but you can't melt it down to make it into something else.

Polymers such as polystrene and nylon and polyethylene are thermoplastics, their polymer chins are formed in chenmical reactions that take place before the plastic ever gets near a mold. They can be melted and remolded over and over again.

Plastics, cheaply and easily produced, offered slvation from haphazard and uneven distribtion of natural resources. Most o the plastics discovered in the 1930's were monopolized by the military over the course of World War II. Plastic production expanded explosively after the war. Tupperware, naugahyde chairs, formica counters, red acrylic taillights, saran wrap, vinyl siding, squeeze bottles, push buttons, Barbie dolls, lycra bras,, sneakers, etc. were created.

It's hard to say when the polymer rapture began to fade, but it was gone by 1967.

Today, few other materials carry such a negative set of associations or stir such visceral disgust. Much of the patics we've produced are still with us today – as liter, layers of landfill, and detritus in the ocean. Humand could disappear from the earth tomorrow, but many of the plastics we'vemade will last for centuries. Each of them offers an object lesson on what it means to live in Plasticville, enmeshed in a web of materials that are rightly considered both the miracle and menace ofmodernlife.

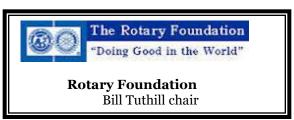

It is increasingly difficult to believe that hti space of plasticization is sustainable, that the natural world canlong endure our ceaseless "improving onnature."
