- Family History Meets the 21st Century: The joys of uncovering and preserving your family's stories

How much do you know about your great grandparents? For most of us, the answer is "very little". Wouldn't it be great if our future great grandchildren could answer that question differently? Well it's never too early, or too late, to start capturing the stories that have defined your life and the lives of those around you.

On May 29th, come share in the joy of uncovering and preserving family history. The presentation will highlight the importance of recording the stories and traditions of individuals, and discuss how technology is making the preservation of these stories both exciting and easy. We'll also present some tips on discovering information on one's family through genealogical research. It will be a fun, interactive presentation, with plenty of audience participation and time for Q&A. The presentation will be led by David Adelman, the founder and CEO of Reel Tributes. Reel Tributes is the premier producer of family history films. You can learn more about the company at www.reeltributes.com.

David Adelman is the Founder and CEO of Reel Tributes, the premier producer of high-end personal history documentaries. He founded Reel Tributes after his grandmother passed away, and his mom made an amazing film about their family. Prior to founding Reel Tributes, David received his Masters in Business Administration from the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School, where he majored in Entrepreneurial Management. David graduated as a Palmer Scholar (top 5% of his graduating class) and was selected as Wharton's McGowan Fellow. He serves on the advisory board of Boston International, a nonprofit he co-founded.

Before Wharton, David was an associate with Charlesbank Capital Partners, a middle-market private equity firm in Boston. He also worked for the management consulting firm Bain & Company, advising clients in Los Angeles, Australia, and India. He holds a Bachelor's Degree in Government, cum laude, from Harvard University, and grew up in Israel where he was the Israeli junior national golf champion. He now lives in Washington, DC with his wife Melissa, and enjoys playing golf and traveling in his (minimal) spare time. David is a member of the prestigious Young Entrepreneur Council and has been featured in Forbes, FOX News, Modern Luxury, and several other publications. His father has been a Rotarian for 34 years and David was honored as a Paul Harris Fellow.
