Program

Carlton gave a presentation on The National Anthem. He noted that The Star-Spangled Banner was written the morning after the Battle of Baltimore, when Francis Scott Key saw that the Americans had prevailed against British assault on Fort McHenry. Although he was being held as a prisoner on a British ship, he could see the flag still flying at the Fort. As Carlton noted, the first verse asks the question about seeing the flag in the “dawn’s early light.” The second verse infers that the British thought that our army was inferior, and the third verse looks forward to our future as a “land of the free and home of the brave.”
