April Fool's Day Issue--

Vickey Applegreen will soon change her name to Vickey Applereddelicious. She says Rotary has made her a sweeter person.

Nels DeAlmeida is buying a new eco-yacht that will run on solar power with a back-up Alcohol engine. The fuel for the latter can be used for on board cocktails in a pinch.

Allison Fulton is shortly going to announce her engagement to a Saudi Prince. She claims it is time for her to move up beyond the middle class...and Saudis often have multiple wives allowing Allison instant fellowship.

Carl Bailey and his wife Lauren are opening a new tennis camp in Beverly Hills in order to help the lonely kids there who only know their nannies. All enrollees will be required to attend Rotary Interact or Rotaract meetings for moral training.

John Lucchesi is building another boat, and instead of using a special cement like the last one, the new material he is using is Styrofoam. It can break up, but it will never sink. It uses Nerf balls instead of ball bearings for ballast. This impressive yacht will sport a tall crow's nest for birder Caryl and it can be carried on the top of a "Smart Car" or a bike.

Sperry Rail's Mark Havira is opening a new one star "theme" restaurant. It will be called "The Broken Rail," and will be housed in an old railroad car. Its primary dish will be Hobo stew in a rusty tin can with a slab of diesel smoked salmon, wrapped in wax paper and presented in a lunch box. Candles will emit the odor of a diesel locomotive. Bib overalls are optional.

Fred Kayal is thinking of applying to NASA for astronaut training. He would like to be one of the first people to stand on Mars. His MD puts him close to the front of the line.

Bob Vetter is expanding his Amber Alert program to include Rotarians who have strayed from the fold, allowing the club to find them quickly, and bring them back to the club.

Wayne Curtis, a snowbird, is looking for a third home in Siberia for the summer; he constantly obsesses over the effects of global warming, and wants to be ahead of the curve when Danbury gets too warm to tolerate or is flooded by the rising L. I. Sound.

Anita Ragona wants a fund to provide snowboard lessons for Rotarians over 70. She feels that too many elderly skiing Rotarians are missing out on the thrill of gliding down the slopes on a snowboard and repeatedly falling down. After that it will be scuba lessons for those on oxygen over 80. One might as well have the thrill of going down in 100 feet of water if you have to have a breathing tube anyway.

Tary Tarlton is turning his property into a pig farm. He has experience in this endeavor, and will ultimately guarantee a pork roast in every Rotarian's pot.

Tim Seibert's insurance firm has now added a policy to insure people over 100. A premium for a $10,000 policy is only $4,000 a month. No physical exam is required since the policyholder might expire before the exam could take place. His wife, Jennifer, encouraged the move.

Frank Scahill admits he was once 5 foot six, but has become tall through the use of elevator shoes, and an old medieval torture stretch rack he cranks up every day. Vitamins help, too.

Josh Gregorio is going to Philadelphia to see if he can repair the Liberty Bell with a new seamless cement/adhesive/glue he has developed. That crack in the bell is unsightly. He also plans to see if he can duplicate Rocky Balboa's run up the 72 steps of the Philadelphia Museum of Art without pausing. If he likes it there, he plans on staying. The fact that his girlfriend Liz Darin just obtained a job there may be a minor consideration. Being the city of Brotherly Love, fellowship at their Rotary Clubs must be awesome.

Being a service family, Marvin Paige has enrolled in the U.S. Marine Corps. He hopes to take both helicopter and pilot training, soon. Carole Paige is thrilled.

John Murphy is now attempting to have Major League Baseball accept The Westerners as part of their league expansion. It would make it a lot easier to secure a top flight stadium for the team.

Every year we have a special issue roasting our beloved members. April 1st is the perfect day to do this. We hope that none of you takes any of the above seriously. It's all in fun and is beyond the pale of belief. If we failed to nail you this year, we'll get you next year. Enjoy. The Editor
