"You don't really know how much you can do until you stand up and decide to try."

-Dave Kovic, Dave (1993)

Did you know: Electronic Hearing Protection (EHP) has been becoming increasingly cheap and effective over the past 10 years. EHP plays and amplifies quiet sounds, while cutting out the audio when ear-damaging sounds occur. Originally being conceptualized as over-the-ear headphones to be plugged into radio equipment, they've evolved into many new consumer products, such as EHP ear plugs like the Caldwell E-Max Shadows, which also function as Bluetooth headphones (for use with phones or mp3 players). Ray loves his for jogging with music while being able to hear ambient sounds clearly or working in a hearing protection area while talking to others normally. Thinking of purchasing EHP? Email Ray and he'll bring his to a meeting.
