About Rev. Dr. Jamesetta Ferguson's work:

MOLO Village CDC is a nonprofit organization founded in 2011 to engage residents of West Louisville's historic and rapidly evolving Russell neighborhood in holistic approaches to community development. MOLO especially focuses its work on individuals and families impacted by the high rate of poverty, incarceration and recidivism, helping them transform themselves into resources that benefit the entire community. MOLO programs serve an average of 1,000 people per week and include life skills training and counseling, credit counseling and wealth building, and managing weekly substance abuse and recovery groups. In 2015, after consultation with the city, MOLO began working with a team of development professionals to create and implement a development plan for a 30,000 SF office/retail building to be located on W. Jefferson and S. 12th Streets. In addition to providing space for expanding MOLO services, the new building will provide residents with basic retail and office services not currently available locally.
