Together We Connect!

Message from the President

Dear Fellow Rotarians,

As we welcome September, we also embrace Basic Education and Literacy Month. This month's theme is central to Rotary's mission of service and reminds us of the significant impact we can have by promoting education and literacy in our communities. Whether through supporting local schools or those abroad, encouraging reading programs, or providing resources, our efforts help build a foundation for a better future.

This month, we have an engaging lineup of events and speakers that reflect our commitment to learning and community engagement. On September 4, we are excited to welcome Russian artist and fellow Rotarian, Ludmila Pawlowska. Ludmila will join us for an informal Q&A session, where we can learn more about her art, her Rotary activities, and the Icons In Transformation exhibit at St. James Episcopal Church. On September 18, we welcome Jenna Brozik, a candidate for Whitman County Superior Court Judge, as our guest speaker. This will be an excellent opportunity to hear from someone who could play a crucial role in our local judicial system.

Let's make September a month of learning, growth, and fellowship as we continue our journey together in Rotary.

In Rotary service,
Eric Hollenbeck
President, Rotary Club of Pullman

International Day of Peace - 21 September 2024

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the United Nations General Assembly's adoption of the Declaration and Programme of Action on a Culture of Peace.

In that declaration, the United Nations' most inclusive body recognized that peace is not only the absence of conflict, but also requires a positive, dynamic participatory process where dialogue is encouraged and conflicts are solved in a spirit of mutual understanding and cooperation.

The Constitution of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) starts with the notion that "wars begin in the minds of men so it is in the minds of men that the defences of peace must be constructed". It is this notion that framed the theme and logo of this year's observance of the International Day of Peace. The ideas of peace, the culture of peace, need to be cultivated in the minds of children and communities through formal and informal education, across countries and generations.

The International Day of Peace has always been a time to lay down weapons and observe ceasefires. But it now must also be a time for people to see each other's humanity. Our survival as a global community depends on that.

Rotarians are known as "People of Action." It is incumbent upon us to spread the message of Peace and Humanitarian Service throughout our communities and the world.

Transcend International, an organization established by Johan Galtung, the father of Peace and Conflict Studies, and the originator of the concept of Positive Peace, recently published "A Manifesto for Action." Part of this work included an article by David Adams, titled, "Transition to a Culture of Peace."

This article recommends eight strategies for motivating individuals to participate in building a Culture of Peace that involves addressing various psychological, social, and practical factors.

1. Education and Awareness

Promote Understanding: Raise awareness about the importance of a Culture of Peace through education. Utilize workshops, seminars, and courses to educate individuals about peace, conflict resolution, and the impact of violence.

Highlight Success Stories: Share real-life examples and success stories of peaceful resolutions and communities that have benefited from peace-building efforts. This can inspire and motivate individuals by showing tangible results.

2. Personal Relevance and Empowerment

Connect Personally: Help individuals see how a Culture of Peace can positively affect their own lives and communities. When people understand the personal benefits, they are more likely to get involved.

Empower Action: Provide tools and resources that enable individuals to contribute effectively. This includes training in conflict resolution, communication skills, and peace-building techniques.

3. Community Engagement

Foster Community Spirit: Encourage a sense of community and collective responsibility. Create spaces for dialogue and collaboration where people can come together to work on peace-building projects.

Local Initiatives: Support local peace initiatives that address specific community needs and concerns. People are more motivated to participate when they see direct impacts in their immediate environment.

4. Incentives and Recognition

Recognize Contributions: Acknowledge and celebrate the efforts of individuals and groups involved in peace-building. Recognition can be in the form of awards, public appreciation, or media coverage.

Provide Incentives: Offer tangible incentives, such as grants, scholarships, or career opportunities, for those who actively contribute to peace-building activities.

5. Leadership and Role Models

Leverage Influential Figures: Engage community leaders, celebrities, and respected figures to Leverage Influential Figures: Engage community leaders, celebrities, and respected figures to advocate for a Culture of Peace. Their influence can motivate others to follow suit.

Develop Role Models: Highlight individuals who exemplify peace-building values and practices. Role models can inspire others to emulate their behavior.

6. Collaborative Networks

Build Partnerships: Establish networks and partnerships with organizations, schools, businesses, and other entities to promote a Culture of Peace. Collaborative efforts can amplify impact and reach.

Facilitate Dialogue: Create forums for open dialogue where different groups can share perspectives, address conflicts, and find common ground.

7. Inclusive and Diverse Approaches

Promote Inclusivity: Ensure that peace-building efforts are inclusive and consider the perspectives of diverse groups, including marginalized and vulnerable populations.

Cultural Sensitivity: Respect and incorporate cultural differences in peace-building strategies.

Tailor approaches to fit the cultural context of the target audience.

8. Sustainable Practices

Long-term Commitment: Encourage long-term engagement by demonstrating the ongoing need for peace-building efforts. Emphasize that building a Culture of Peace is a continuous process.

Measure Impact: Track and communicate the impact of peace-building activities. Showing measurable progress can sustain motivation and support.

Conclusion

By combining education, personal relevance, community engagement, incentives, leadership, collaboration, inclusivity, and sustainability, individuals can be effectively motivated to participate in building a Culture of Peace. Each strategy should be tailored to the specific audience and context to maximize its effectiveness.

Are you and your club prepared to participate in Rotary Peacebuilding initiatives? Rotary International was instrumental in the creation of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and UNESCO. Let's continue this tradition by learning how to spread the ideals of Peace in our Clubs, in our Communities and across the Globe.
