President Jay opened this week's meeting punctually at 12:30 with very few remarks beyond a hearty greeting and Kimberly Gruidl led the pledge.

The songsters, led by Stu Frazier, helped us through "This town is our town" to the tune of "This land is our land." The club sang along with enthusiasm.

Phil Dean gave a thoughtful and succinct Thought of the Day.

Unfortunately Alan Frank was out again, due to his continuing difficulties, but Paul McCandless filled in without a hitch or glitch. Sheila and Ted were the roaming microphone handlers this week.

Visiting Rotarians started with former noon club member Lori Souza who spoke briefly about a Super Bowl pool through the Livermore morning club. There is a prize for the winners of the pool, but the real winners will be the needy families who will be getting turkeys through the proceeds of this fundraiser. And, as always, it was a pleasure to also have Bob Tucknot, from Dublin.

◆Hi, Bob!◆

Guests of Rotarians this week included Jane Nebo, Dan Moore, and two new applicants to the club: Jeff Youngsma, and Christina Marion.

Bob Cowan gave information about the imminent crab feed. We're sold out! However, if you don't have tickets, give Debbie Peck a call to see if any seats have freed up. Raffle tickets for the feed will be available this coming week at a discounted price.

Carol Howell is hosting the signing of the dictionaries at her house on January 30. Pizza and beverages will be served. Please RSVP to Carol.

The 12th day of Brexit is February 12, so a presentation by the Brits of the club will dominate the meeting. Medieval tournament rules will apply so bring your helmets. While answers are promised to be short, Paul Thompson asked for an additional hour of meeting time. He was summarily denied his request. Marc Roberts was able to start his program a little early, and as usual was very informative and entertaining about the status of Livermore's current City Projects. There was plenty of time for questions, as well.

Next week's program is the Valentine's Day Auction of the Interact Student Baskets, led by Jacquie Williams-Courtright, so think of your sweetheart and bring your check book!
