Be friendly, kind, and considerate. Teach your children to teach others the way they would like to be treated, regardless of any differences of opinion we may have. With internet, news, and media 24/7 - ideas and insults can spread more quickly in a way face-to-face never would have.

Member Talk and Program:

Brian Mayall voluntarily yielded his time to introduce this week's speaker, Professor Raul Andino, so we could hear more from him. We hope to hear more from Brian another time, as he was involved in the development of the first oral polio vaccine over 60 years ago and keeps up with the strides in helping with the current pandemic.

Professor Andino is a virologist and professor in the Department of Microbiology and Immunology at the University of California, San Francisco. He is noted for leading a team of researchers that developed the first new oral polio vaccine in 50 years.

This Week's Program: Advances in Polio Virus Research and COVID 19

Professor Andino gave an information-rich talk about the advances in developing a new Polio vaccine called OPV2 (Oral Polio Vaccine 2). The problem with the original oral vaccine was that it could mutate in the inoculated person into a form that could spread to other people and cause infection. Development took about 10 years and utilizes new techniques that allow scientists to block these mutations from happening and thus reduce or eliminate the spread of the mutated virus. The results have been extremely positive. I encourage you to view our meeting video, as his presentation is easily to understand, while being rich in technical and scientific information.

Professor Andino also gave us an update on the advances on COVID 10 research, which was equally informative. This presentation continued after the bell rang but is included in the video. The primary focus was on the types of vaccines available, how herd immunity works, and the challenges we face in trying to achieve that.

Next Week's Program: Tracy Hein, LPFD - Disaster Preparedness
