KINDNESS

Acts of kindness are basic to every moral code and are probably so for a good reason. Recent research suggests that kindness may improve resiliency by promoting feelings of happiness and peace and supporting immunity.

Good for the body

Kindness has been shown to increase self-esteem, empathy and compassion, and improve mood. It can decrease blood pressure and cortisol, a stress hormone, which directly impacts stress levels. People who give of themselves in a balanced way also tend to be healthier and live longer. Kindness can increase your sense of connectivity with others, which can directly impact loneliness, improve low mood and enhance relationships in general. It also can be contagious. Looking for ways to show kindness can give you a focus activity, especially if you tend to be anxious or stressed in some social situations.

Speaker: Wayne Silzel Craft Talk

Wayne was born on April 15th 1936 and grew up on a farm in Eastern Washington State. The farm grew wheat, lentils, beans and cattle. He attended Whitman College in Walla Walla, Washington and obtained his degree in economics in 1959. He married his wife Mary in 1960. He was hoping to be a farmer, but he suffered from asthma, making it difficult to be around dust and pollen. He went into the mortgage lending business and has been at it ever since. He had an aortic valve replacement recently and marveled at the ease of the procedure.
