Program

Tina Friend introduced Leon Firsh, Director of Coronado Public Services for a tour of what's underneath our city streets. The quick answer is wires. The answer we all wanted to know about is what happens when it rains and Coronado floods. The answer is that everything works well unless there is a high tide corresponding with heavy rains. Because we live on flat lands there is nowhere for the water to go besides into the street. It was a fascinating presentation and now we know what is under our streets.
