PROGRAM

Tim Echols

Georgia Public Service Commissioner

As a senior in high school in 1978, the Atlanta Airport Rotary Club selected Tim Echols as "Student of the Year." While at the luncheon, he met Truett Cathy, a member of the Atlanta Airport Rotary Club. Truett invited Tim to his Hapeville office where he gave Tim a challenge that set him forever on a pathway to civic leadership and involvement.

After building a national non-profit organization, Tim ran for and was elected to statewide office in 2010 serving as Public Service Commissioner. His primary job is energy regulation.

When Tim took office, Georgia was 34th in solar power. Now, eleven years later the state is 4th in the nation in approved solar. Tim's commitment to promoting clean energy has resulted not only in millions of solar panels being installed but an increase in electric vehicles with Georgia now ranking fourth in the nation in electric vehicles.

Tim created the Clean Energy Roadshow that has traveled the state every summer for the last ten years. This educational event travels to cities helping commuters, businesses and municipal governments evaluate alternative fuel for their transportation and residential use.

Tim also led the effort to provide the Salvation Army and two other agencies with $5 million to help low income seniors in Atlanta with heating assistance. That program continues today.

Tim created a pilot program to provide specially equipped iPads to the hearing impaired to help them function more productively. Tim also led the PSC to increase the number of pediatric hearing aids it provides to eligible hearing-impaired children.

In 2019, Tim rallied donors and the solar community to build and donate to the Hog Hammock Foundation a 16-panel solar pavilion for the community library on the remote Sapelo Island off Georgia's coast. Sapelo is the home of one of the last remaining Gullah Geechee communities and this array will provide free electricity to the library for 30 years.

PROGRAM, Cont.

With help from YellaWood, Southern Current and EDF Renewables, Echols led the way to build this lasting asset.

Tim has a weekly radio show called Energy Matters airing on Cox Media Group and in four other Georgia media markets. The show has over 300 episodes.

Tim has tried to lead by example. He added solar hot water heating to his Athens home just before being sworn-in. He bought a natural gas car, a propane van and owns two electric cars. Tim has supported and approved new carbon-free nuclear energy sources for Georgia that will provide baseload power for generations. He also supports recycling the nuclear waste and using the remaining energy resident in those fuel rods as the most sustainable course of action for the state and nation. Tim represented the United States at the World Nuclear Exhibition for the last seven years.

During the 2023-2024 school year, Commissioner Echols along with his colleague Commission Chairman Jason Shaw sponsored a new clean glass recycling contest for Georgia high school students. Students from twenty-three student led clubs across Georgia's schools participating, collecting a total of 37240.32 lbs of clean, recyclable glass which was delivered to Arglass in Valdosta, GA.

Tim also has been at the forefront in fighting human sex trafficking. He created the "Unholy Tour" that helps policy makers see first-hand the harms of human trafficking. As a part of his efforts to educate the public about the harms of trafficking, Tim created the Wilberforce Fellowship that meets once per year at Jackson Lake in Newton County. Tim and Judge Tim Batten head this effort.

Tim, who earned a Master's degree in Non-Profit Organizations, considers the charities in our state a great resource. Tim founded "TeenPact" and grew the mock legislative youth program for teens to 38 states in his tenure. He continues to serve on the Board of Directors, and TeenPact is now in all 50 states.

Tim and his wife, Windy, have been married 38 years and they have seven children and now live in Hoschton, Georgia.
