

Lourdes Ramirez, a prominent activist and advocate for Siesta Key, has taken a leading role in challenging high-density hotel developments on the island. She has successfully initiated two legal actions against Sarasota County for alleged growth law violations. In 2023, Ramirez achieved major wins in both the Florida Department of Administrative Hearings and Sarasota County's Circuit Court, hindering proposed hotel projects.

Critics have praised her legal victories as "monumental" in the battle against the proposed hotels. Through her efforts, Ramirez has emerged as a central figure in the ongoing discourse concerning the development and management of growth on barrier islands.
