If you missed us last week we reminded our club of the importance of support needed for the continual relief in the Bahamas. If you want to learn more or donate please visit: <https://rotarydistrict6970.org/>. While you are on the district page make sure to check out our very own

Rosemary Takacs and Sherry Mahoney in the International Service section. International Service exemplifies our global reach in promoting peace and understanding. We support this service avenue by sponsoring or volunteering on international projects, seeking partners abroad, and more. You ladies rock and we are grateful for all you do for TBRCITW! We also celebrated one of our very favorite staff members at Marsh Landing CC. Jamal was recognized by Judy Delmar who is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Her and her fellow DAR's couldn't stop gushing over how wonderful he was and how attentive he always is and we couldn't agree with you more. Jamal is here with Robert Delmar and President Vickie Cavey sharing a laugh. Thank you for everything you do to make our mornings the best! Speaking of another great morning-mark your calendar for our next A1A clean-up coming up on October 12th. This is great for everyone especially our newest red badgers. See you there!

September 26th Program:

As Deputy Director of Jacksonville Zoo and Gardens since 2010, Dan's responsible for all aspects of daily animal care including conservation, animal health and animal wellness. His 36-year career has given him the opportunity to work for some of the world's top zoological institutions, including the Wildlife Conservation Society's Bronx and Queens Zoos, the Philadelphia Zoological Garden, Australia's Royal Melbourne Zoo and the Audubon Zoo in New Orleans. As Audubon Zoo's General Curator, he led the Hurricane Response Team. Dan and 13 others remained at the zoo throughout Katrina and her aftermath, living on premises for nearly two months. Unlike most of the city's population, the zoo crew were never forcibly evacuated from New Orleans. They stayed behind because the animals could not leave. Staff was well prepared, but many challenges were impossible to predict. Dan credits Audubon's survival to the remarkable dedication of the team, solid planning and good fortune. His wife Laura currently heads her own conservation and welfare consulting company, ADISA (Uh-DEE-suh). Fourteen years ago, Laura was CEO for the Louisiana SPCA. Laura oversaw the evacuation of the SPCA animals prior to landfall and then managed the massive rescue and recovery of the region's companion creatures. Dan's first-person experiences and eyewitness accounts provide a unique and engaging perspective of Katrina's tragedies and triumphs.

Dr. Robert A. Pooley, a radiologist with Mayo spoke to us last week about 3D anatomical modeling. 3D printing, an exciting, relatively new addition to the imaging armamentarium, is the process of creating a physical model based on a digital file using a 3D printer — a machine that lays down multiple layers of material guided by the model file. Medical 3D printing allows volumetric imaging data sets (most commonly CT, MRI or ultrasound images) to be converted into physical 3D replicas of anatomy. While this technology has been available since the early 1980s and has been used for planning dental and craniofacial surgery for over 25 years, 3D printing for cardiovascular applications has seen a significant growth only over the last several years. This technology not only shows promise as a cardiovascular diagnostic tool, but also has implications in therapies as 3D bioprinting may be useful for the creation of living 3D-printed implants. Mayo Clinic has found that 3D-printed models are also effective tools for communication within health care teams and with patients. Within the practice, specific 3D models used to explain disease processes and planned procedures enhance patient understanding and facilitate shared decision-making and informed consent, which ultimately improves patient satisfaction. At Mayo Clinic the foundational approach to complex medical problems has been a multidisciplinary collaborative approach, and this is certainly embraced in the setting of the adult congenital heart disease practice. In the current era, multimodality imaging techniques are being used more frequently as their utility is better appreciated.
