February 20th Program:

Diane Tuttle, CEO joined Angelwood in Feb. 2000. She holds both bachelor's and master's degrees in the Human Services field. After being introduced to children who needed a lot of physical and developmental support when she volunteered at a summer camp in high school, she discovered her passion for working with individuals living with intellectual and developmental differences. She has remained a part of the field most of her adult life. Diane approaches her work with a unique perspective. Her oldest child needed total care throughout his abbreviated life. Today her grandson lives with both physical and developmental special needs. Even though he is in Pennsylvania with his family, she credits them with keeping her grounded. Diane continues to advocate for all people living with developmental differences and feels blessed to lead Angelwood's team of caring professionals.

John Laurence founded Empowerment Media along with his wife Susan in 2004. He has served as CEO/Executive Director or on the board ever since leading all activities for the non-profit. John has spent more than four decades in the entertainment world industry producing and directing movies, reality shows, documentaries and most recently a video curriculum entitled the Two@aTime Project, which teaches communication and relational skills to young people. His movie resume includes being a producer along with his wife, Susan on five family movies on NBC and FOX through the "Family Movie Night" franchise with Walmart and Procter & Gamble. He also produced and directed bonus material content for nine movies in the series. Additionally, he has directed and co-produced (with his wife) three nationally distributed reality TV series, the most recent entitled "Dream Quest" which appears on Amazon. The series teaches young people how to chase their dream. His other two reality series co-produced with Susan include "Ultimate Choice" and "Real Girls Real Life". Both were nationally syndicated and seen worldwide for over a decade.
