Katie Hoffman from Create Appalachia

As Executive Director of Create Appalachia, a non-profit incubator of businesses that combine creativity and technology, Katie is thrilled by the opportunity to show others what her scholarship and lived experience has taught her about Appalachia: this is a place where innovation and inventiveness runs deep, and where there is a depth and breadth of artistry just waiting to be nurtured, grown, and showcased. She is grateful for the opportunity to visit the Johnson City Noon Rotary Club and tell you more about this innovative organization and its post-pandemic growth.

Katie and her husband Brett Tiller are the founders and owners of a growing small business venture: Vintage Kitchen Cast Iron and Collectibles. Katie and Brett specialize in buying, reclaiming and selling vintage cast iron and placing it in the hands of appreciative cooks and collectors. They have recently added cast iron restoration services for those who have cast iron heirlooms that need some TLC. Vintage Kitchen has been featured at food conferences and celebrations of Appalachian culture in VA, TN, and KY.

Wine Tasting Event is August 15th

This is just a reminder for those who signed up to attend the wine tasting event on August 15th.

The wine pairing dinner will provide a fun menu, interesting wine, and great fellowship!

The event will take place at The Gallery at 6:30pm.
