

Job Corps Center teaches skills, conservation

Keith Bowers, Liaison Specialist with the LBJ Job Corps and a member of the Rotary Club of Franklin Daybreak, updated the club on the activities of the LBJ Job Corps. The Job Corps was started by President Lyndon B. Johnson in the 1960s when he recognized the need for youth training programs that focused on at-risk youth. Currently, there are 120 Job Corps centers nationwide and 24 are operated by the Forest Service, including the one located in Macon County. The facility located in Macon County was the first center created. The LBJ Job Corps focuses on six areas of training: brick masonry, culinary arts, painting, welding, facility maintenance and business administration. The center houses a full academic department and in addition to skills training, helps students who need it earn their GED. There are 100 students enrolled locally at the LBJ Job Corps Center.
