Health & Happiness: Dr Johnsen - born on this day: George Jennings (10 November 1810 – 17 April 1882) was an English sanitary engineer and plumber who invented the first public flush toilets. He was the eldest of seven children of Jonas Joseph Jennings and Mary Dimmock and educated at the local school run by his uncle-in-law Joshua Withers. He specialized in designing toilets that were "as perfect a sanitary closet as can be made" and public sanitation projects such as the design of the underground 'public convenience'.
