Veterans share their histories of military service

In advance of Veterans Day 2019, members of the Wilmington Rotary Club were asked to describe their time in the armed service and comment on what it meant to them. Here are their answers, with 2021 updates from new members.

Larry Anderson

Maryland U.S. Army National Guard Specialist 5th Class

I served in the Maryland Army National Guard from 1965 to 1971. I started with the 29th Infantry Division, a high-priority unit during the Vietnam War, where I was a member of a rifle platoon. During the last year and a half of my service time, our company became part of the 729 Maintenance Battalion. My final job was serving as an accounting specialist in charge of controlling the company's inventory programs.

Henry Brown

U.S. Army, Major

I graduated from the Virginia Military Institute with a BS in civil engineering in June, 1960. I received a commission as a second lieutenant in the U.S. Army on June 14, 1960. I was assigned to Fort Benning, Georgia and graduated from the Officers Basic Program. I was subsequently assigned to Fort Jackson, S.C., where I served as commander of a basic training company. In 1961, I was assigned to serve as post engineer at Fort Jackson based on my engineering background. I subsequently applied for and received a branch transfer to the Army Corps of Engineers. I was promoted to first lieutenant in 1961. At the end of my active duty obligation in 1963 I entered the Corps of Engineers Reserves, being promoted to captain and later major during my tenure.

Editor's note: This publication's first edition was created in coordination with the club's float in the 2019 Veterans Day parade. This updated third annual tribute to the club's veterans coincides with the return of the parade on Nov. 6, 2021.

David R. Brown

U.S. Navy, Electrician's Mate

I served in the Navy starting literally about 36 hours after high school graduation in 1985. After boot camp in Orlando I studied in Millington, Tenn. and Kingsville, Texas before being stationed at Oceana Naval Air Station in Virginia Beach, VA. I was a member of VF-43, a squadron that used A-4 fighter jets as adversaries in off-shore practice dogfights. I was an aviation electrician's mate working to maintain aircraft electronics and instruments. I received an Honorable Discharge in 1989.

James L. Edge

U.S. Army, Sergeant First Class

I served in the United States Army 82nd Airborne Division from 1952 to 1955 and for six years as an active reserve. This included combat action in Hay Street Bars. I grew up in and around Fort Bragg and always planned to be a trooper and earn a GI bill.

William Bryan Fuller

U.S. Navy, Lieutenant

After finishing Officer Candidate School, I served as an officer aboard a ship where we replenished the United States Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea. My main job was performing officer of the deck bridge watches. I served active duty from 1964 through 1967.

Robert Greer

U.S. Coast Guard Reserve, Port Securityman Second Class

I joined the US Coast Guard Reserve in the mid-sixties. I was going to college and worked as a lifeguard at Wrightsville Beach in the summer. We worked closely with the Coast Guard. I was getting close to graduation and the draft was in play. I decided on the Coast Guard rather than be drafted. I stayed in the reserves until September of 1972 when I was honorably discharged with the rank of Port Securityman Second Class.

Wilbur D. Jones, Jr.

U.S. Navy, Captain

I was commissioned from Officer Candidate School in 1956. As both a Regular Navy and Navy Reserve officer, I served on six ships in the Pacific and Mediterranean with a specialty in amphibious warfare. I commanded two Navy Reserve units including an amphibious assault support unit. I served for four and a half years as a captain in the Pentagon and served on the staff of the chief of naval operations as the Navy's weapons systems integrated logistics support coordinator. I retired in 1984 after 28 years of service. I served the Department of Defense nearly 41 years as a Navy officer and civilian, including seven and a half years at the Pentagon.

James Hundley

U.S. Air Force, Major

After graduating from medical school, I was accepted into the Berry Plan program, which allowed me to enlist in the Air Force but complete my six-year residency training to become an orthopaedic surgeon before going on active duty. I was then assigned to the Carswell Air Force Base Regional Hospital in Fort Worth, Texas, a referral center for spine, hand, and pediatric orthopaedic conditions, and became chairman of the Department of Orthopaedic Surgery. At that time, the Dallas-Fort Worth area was the second largest military retirement area in the country, and we had the honor of treating many veterans and their families during that time. The Vietnam conflict was winding down, so we saw very few wartime injuries, but we saw plenty of wild, young airmen who crashed their motorcycles and so on. My only airplane-accident patient was a fighter pilot who had to bail out of his jet and broke his leg while maneuvering to avoid a brush fire caused by his crash.

Bill Humphrey

U.S. Army, Corporal

I served for two years during the Korean War doing cryptography code work under the "for eyes only" classification for the Army, which was the highest classification they had. I was an S3 corporal and served at a well-secured location.

Robert Kitchen
U.S. Navy, Lieutenant

I attended Tulane University on a Navy scholarship and graduated with a Bachelor of Science in engineering in 1973. I was commissioned as an ensign and selected for the Navy Nuclear Power Program. After completion of one year of training in California and in Idaho, I was assigned as a division officer aboard the submarine USS Sargo (SSN 583) in Pearl Harbor. We completed two deployments to the Western Pacific. In 1977 I was assigned as a tactics instructor at the Submarine Training Center in San Diego and trained submarine crews in anti-submarine warfare before deployment. I left the Navy in 1979 as a lieutenant.

Russ La Belle
U.S. Army, Sergeant

I served in the Civil Air Patrol, which prepared me for being drafted into the U.S. Army, where I served from 1962 to 1964. I began in Fort Hood, Texas, doing artillery surveying as an Army MOS 153a. I then served in the 2nd Armored Division. Highlights included amphibious training and being on the trains headed to Cuba and then turning back around when the Missile Crisis subsided. We were also air-lifted to Germany to perform maneuvers for three weeks to prove to NATO that the Army could deploy a division vs. having to have a permanent presence. Finally, President Kennedy was supposed to review our division on his fateful day in Dallas.

Howard H. Loving Jr.
U.S. Navy, Captain

I am a retired United States Navy captain. I served from 1960 to 1990. I served in combat during the Vietnam War from 1971 to 1972 and in the Persian Gulf and North Arabian Sea from 1980 to 1981. During my career I had four tours as a commanding officer. The Navy provides significant leadership opportunities to young officers serving at sea starting with underway officer of the deck responsibilities in a battle group in unscripted situations. My family's complete support during my four command tours and their willingness to live overseas on four occasions meant the most to me during my career.

Richard McGraw
U.S. Air Force, Major

I served in the United States Air Force from 1955 to 1983 both as an enlisted man and as a public affairs officer. I retired from the Air Force Reserves as a major. I served in Vietnam in 1969 and 1970. For me, the service was all about growing up, teamwork and looking out for your brothers-in-arms.

Bill McMillan
U.S. Air Force, Major

I served in the Air Force Reserves from 1963 until 1968 and went on active duty from 1968 to 1970. I served as a major in the USAF Medical Corps at Travis Air Force Base in California where I became chief of the Gastroenterology Department at a 400-bed general hospital and a 200-bed casualty staging unit. This experience gave me great insight into what our troops faced in Vietnam. My Air Force experience was very useful throughout my medical career.

Tom McMillan
U.S. Coast Guard Hospital Corpsman First Class (HM1)

I served in the U.S. Coast Guard on active duty from 1965 to early 1967. After leaving boot camp at Cape May, N.J., I attended Hospital Corps School at the Great Lakes Naval Base in Illinois. After graduation, I served at the Great Lakes Naval Hospital, then spent time in Cleveland, Ohio and Yorktown, Va. After active duty, I remained in the Coast Guard Reserve for six years, last serving as a hospital corpsman first class (HM1).

John Meehl
U.S. Air Force, Staff Sergeant

I served in the Air Force from 1969 to 1972, including two tours in Vietnam and one tour inside Cheyenne Mountain, Colo., tracking satellites. While in Vietnam, I served in Saigon (now Ho Chi Minh City) attached to a four-service joint command called Military Assistance Command Vietnam (MACV). I also served as an adjunct to the U.S. Embassy in Saigon and received a letter of commendation from Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker for my night teaching at the University of Saigon.

Marcia Morgan
U.S. Army, Colonel

I enlisted in 1975 and was commissioned as one of the first female ordnance officers in 1976. What was supposed to be a short stint turned into 25 years, after which I eventually retired as a colonel. Along the way,

I commanded units in four different countries (including being the first CSS company commander in the 2nd Infantry Division in Korea) and had two tours at the Pentagon.

Matt Mylott
U.S. Marine Corps, Captain

I enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1999 while most the world was still “relatively” peaceful.

I operated as a reconnaissance Marine for a majority of my service years.

My unit was one of the first American elements in Afghanistan, and my battalion led the 2nd Marine Division in the Iraq invasion.

I was most passionate about being accountable for the lives of my brothers, and for fighting tyranny, evil, and interdicting for those who can't fight for themselves.

I permanently separated from the Marine Corps in 2008.

Sean Parrish
U.S. Marine Corps, Staff Sergeant

I served from 2008 to 2017, completing nine-plus years of active duty service on my 30th birthday. I specialized in human intelligence, counterintelligence, intelligence analysis, foreign advisor, security, and combat arms. I was on combat tours in the Middle East and ran around the jungles of Central America. I was fortunate to translate my career skill set directly to the civilian sector. I now work as a consultant in D.C. and completed my education via University of Southern California and Fordham University.

Nick Rhodes Jr.
U.S. Air Force, Lieutenant Colonel

I served in the Air Force from 1966 to 1987. I was commissioned through the ROTC program at N.C.A&T State University. I served on active duty beginning as an aircraft maintenance officer at Chanute AFB in Illinois, Kunsan AFB in South Korea and Norton AFB in California. After completing graduate school, I became an R&D systems acquisition management officer in the satellite communications office at Hanscom AFB in Massachusetts. I then attended the Air Command Staff College at Maxwell AFB in Alabama before returning to Hanscom AFB as an acquisition and information technology officer in the Space Surveillance System Directorate. I returned to South Korea as director of logistics for the Air Force Military Assistance Group and finished my career at the Pentagon as the program manager for the Saudi Arabian AWACS Procurement.

Clark Pearson
U.S. Army, First Lieutenant

at Ft. Lee, Va., for training, schooling, and assigned as battalion executive officer in 1958 and 1959. After active duty I served in the Army Reserves as a first lieutenant from 1960 to 1967. I am currently a member of Post 10, American Legion.

Robert 'R.B.' Richey
U.S. Navy, Lieutenant

Naval Shipyard. Submarine patrols related to serving as a strategic deterrent during the Cold War with the Soviet Union and shipyard duty involved refueling and retrofitting nuclear submarines. I left the Navy after five years of active duty as a lieutenant, USN, upon concluding that submarine patrols during the Vietnam War were not the best way to raise a family.

I was in the Reserve Officer's Training program (ROTC) at the University of Southern Mississippi from 1954 to 1958. I also joined the Army Reserves in 1956-1957 before graduation. After graduation, I was assigned to active duty

Following graduation from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1964 and temporary duty as a computer instructor during Plebe Summer at the Academy, I entered the Navy's Nuclear Power Program and became a nuclear submarine officer. I served aboard two ballistic missile submarines and as the senior nuclear ship superintendent at the Charleston

Bill Rose
U.S. Navy, Commander

Upon graduation from UNC, I entered the Navy Officer Candidate School in Newport, R.I., and received my reserve commission. My first assignment was as gunnery officer aboard USS Eldorado, an amphibious flagship out of San Diego. I spent the next two years aboard, most of that time deployed to WESTPAC supporting the war in Vietnam. After two years at sea, I asked for a transfer to serve with the River Patrol Forces in Vietnam. I arrived two weeks before the big Tet Offensive in 1968 and saw lots of action then and during the remainder of my tour there. After Vietnam, I entered the Reserves. Alongside my career in banking and active civic life, I ended up staying in the Reserves for twenty years, retiring with the rank of commander.

Page Teer
U.S. Army, First Lieutenant

I served two tours with the 11th Cavalry “Black Horse” Regiment in the U.S. Army as a first lieutenant and platoon leader in 1967 and 1968. We were all tanks, probably the toughest, baddest bunch of all. We survived the worst of the Tet Offensive in Vietnam. One of my jobs was “tunnel ratting” and in my photo I had just set some charges to blow them up. I married my wife Joan two weeks before my first trip.

Air Force in Alaska and I was raised in Greensboro which had a large airport.

I was a captain in the Eighth Air Force, which now serves as the Air Force's Global Strike Command. During World War II, I was stationed in England and was a first pilot, flying 27 bombing missions over Germany in a four-engine B-17 bomber named Bottle Baby. I was always interested in flying. I had an uncle who served in the

Frederick Willetts III
U.S. Coast Guard,
Petty Officer Second Class

In 1969, I did a six-month tour of active duty at Cape May, New Jersey, Yorktown, Virginia and during the Vietnam War on Governors Island in New York where I was involved with the loading of explosives. I then served five more years in the Reserves doing monthly drills and two weeks of deployment each summer where I was assigned to the Coast Guard Captain of the Port inspecting ships at the Port of Wilmington and served at the Reserve Training Center in Yorktown, Virginia. I was honorably discharged in 1975.

In memoriam:
Joseph F. Augustine,
U.S. Army, Private First Class

Joe Augustine, a 42-year Rotarian, died Feb. 11, 2021. He was 94. He is survived by his wife, Carolyn. Joe joined the club Feb. 6, 1979, sponsored by H. Van Reid, who was his predecessor as CEO of the Wilmington Chamber of Commerce.

Joe enlisted in the Army at the tail end of World War II and as part of the Medical Corps served in the occupation force in Germany. He wrote, "For 14 months as a physical therapy instructor, my duties were to help rehabilitate injured soldiers. At that time Munich was 95% destroyed from the bombings and had not been reconstructed. My ability to speak fluently in German gave me a unique opportunity to get to know the local people of Munich."
