AUGUST IS MEMBERSHIP MONTH

Is your

FRIEND

a good Rotary member prospect?

IDENTIFYING A GOOD PROSPECT for membership in the Rotary Club of Beaufort involves recognizing key traits and values that align with Rotary's mission and ethos. Here's what to look for:

Passion for Community Service: A prime indicator is a strong commitment to community service. Prospects should demonstrate a genuine interest in addressing local issues such as education, healthcare, and environmental sustainability. Previous involvement in volunteer work or community projects is a good sign they'll fit in well.

Professional Excellence: Look for individuals who excel in their professions and are eager to leverage their skills for the greater good. Rotary values diverse professional backgrounds and encourages members to bring their expertise to benefit the community.

THANK YOU FROM THE SGT-AT-ARMS COMMITTEE

The Committee thanks those Rotarians who come early to set up and those who stay after to close up.

Leadership Potential: Prospects should exhibit leadership qualities or a willingness to develop these skills. Whether through organizing events, leading projects, or serving in club roles, leadership potential is a significant asset in a Rotary member.

Networking Aptitude: A good prospect values building meaningful relationships with local professionals, business leaders, and community organizers. They should appreciate the opportunity to engage with others and collaborate on impactful projects.

Ethical Integrity: Rotary members adhere to the Four-Way Test, which emphasizes truth, fairness, goodwill, and mutual benefit. Prospects should exhibit high ethical standards in their personal and professional lives, ensuring they align with Rotary’s core values.

Global Perspective: A curiosity about global issues and a desire to contribute to international projects is essential. Prospects should be interested in making a difference beyond their local community, engaging in Rotary’s global initiatives.

Positive Attitude and Enthusiasm: Look for individuals who are enthusiastic, optimistic, and eager to participate. A positive attitude helps foster a collaborative and productive club environment.

If someone exhibits these traits, they are likely a strong candidate for membership in the Rotary Club of Beaufort, ready to contribute to both local and global efforts while growing personally and professionally.
